QMMFX LIMITED — INTRODUCING BROKER AGREEMENT

English Translation | Part 4 | Articles 15–22

Article 15 — IB Wallet

15.1. The Company may establish a dedicated internal wallet within the IB Panel to record commissions payable.

15.2. Approved commissions shall be reflected in the IB Wallet after the relevant calculation cycle.

15.3. The IB Wallet is not a bank account, deposit account or independent financial instrument; it is solely part of QMMFX's internal system for recording and administering amounts related to the IB program.

15.4. Subject to available system functionality, the IB may request transfer of the withdrawable balance from the IB Wallet to the central wallet of the IB's user account.

15.5. Once funds have been transferred to the central wallet, withdrawals may be made using the active withdrawal methods available to the account, subject to the Company's financial and control policies.

15.6. The Company may temporarily suspend transfers or withdrawals of disputed amounts pending resolution of security, AML/KYC, fraud, chargeback, technical-error or other legitimate reviews.

Article 16 — Withdrawal of Commissions

16.1. The IB may withdraw withdrawable commissions in accordance with the functionality and schedule available in the system.

16.2. Under the current structure, requests to transfer and withdraw eligible commissions may be made after daily calculations have been finalized.

16.3. At the time of drafting this Agreement, no general minimum amount has been established for IB commission withdrawals.

16.4. The Company reserves the right to establish or amend minimum withdrawal amounts, processing restrictions, settlement periods or other operational withdrawal conditions in the future.

16.5. If a new minimum withdrawal amount is introduced, the IB shall be notified through the Panel, email, notification or other official channels.

16.6. Final withdrawal methods from the central wallet shall depend on the payment and withdrawal methods active at QMMFX and may vary by country, currency, payment service provider or legal requirements.

16.7. Applicable network, bank, payment service provider or other third-party fees may be deducted from the amount receivable in accordance with the terms of the relevant withdrawal method.

Article 17 — Changes to Commission Rates and Structure

17.1. The IB acknowledges that commission rates and structures may be affected by changing commercial and trading conditions.

17.2. The Company may review or change the IB commission structure for future activities, taking into account factors including: (a) changes to liquidity provider or LP terms; (b) trading or execution costs; (c) the dollar volume or patterns of client trades; (d) trading account types or conditions; (e) market conditions; (f) the IB program's commercial structure; (g) the IB's Level or Tier; (h) legal or risk-management requirements; and (i) specific terms agreed by the parties.

17.3. Changes in commission rates shall generally apply to activities and trades after the effective date of the change and shall not extinguish previously finalized and confirmed commissions, except in cases of calculation error, fraud, abuse or other matters requiring adjustment under this Agreement.

17.4. The Company may notify the IB of changes to commission terms by email, the IB Panel, internal notification or other official channels.

17.5. To the extent permitted by applicable law, the IB's continued participation in the program after new terms become effective shall constitute continued cooperation under those terms.

17.6. Where commission rates are governed by an individual commercial agreement, that agreement shall govern the relevant financial relationship until amended, replaced or terminated.

Article 18 — Objections to Commission Calculations

18.1. The IB shall review the financial reports and commissions recorded in the Panel at reasonable intervals.

18.2. If a discrepancy is identified, the IB may submit an objection with relevant information to ib@qmmfx.com or another official channel announced by the Company.

18.3. Where possible, a review request should identify the relevant client or account, period, trade and nature of the discrepancy.

18.4. Upon receiving an objection, the Company shall review the matter using its trading, financial and technical system records.

18.5. Where a calculation error is established, the necessary correction shall be made to the IB account or wallet.

18.6. In the event of a discrepancy between provisional interface information and the Company's final, reliable trading and financial records, the final system records shall form the basis of review, subject to applicable law.

18.7. The IB shall not exploit an obvious system or calculation error to claim or withdraw amounts that the IB reasonably knows it is not entitled to receive.

Article 19 — Taxes and Financial Obligations of the IB

19.1. The IB is responsible for determining and paying any taxes, duties, charges and other financial obligations arising from its income in the relevant jurisdiction.

19.2. QMMFX is not responsible for providing tax advice to the IB.

19.3. Where applicable law requires the Company to deduct, withhold or report amounts relating to IB payments, the Company may take the measures required by that law.

19.4. Upon a lawful and reasonable request by the Company, the IB shall provide information necessary for tax compliance or statutory reporting relating to the cooperation.

Article 20 — Sub-IB Program

20.1. QMMFX may make Sub-IB network creation and development available to all or certain IBs in accordance with the commercial structure and specific terms established by the Company.

20.2. A Sub-IB is an independent natural or legal person who, following registration, qualification and Company approval, is placed within the network structure of an upstream IB.

20.3. Merely referring a person as a Sub-IB does not result in automatic acceptance into the IB program; QMMFX may independently review, approve or reject each application.

20.4. The Sub-IB structure may contain multiple Levels and Tiers, with the conditions of each, including revenue calculation, determined by specific agreements, network performance and current Company policies.

20.5. An upstream IB has no legal or permanent ownership of Sub-IBs in its network. Each Sub-IB's contractual relationship with QMMFX is independently governed by agreements and terms approved by the Company.

20.6. The Company may individually determine the number of levels, Sub-IB relationships, promotion criteria, rates and other program features for each IB or cooperation structure.

Article 21 — Calculation of Sub-IB Revenue

21.1. Commissions or revenue payable to an upstream IB in respect of Sub-IB activities shall be calculated according to the commercial structure and rates agreed with the Company.

21.2. Unless otherwise stipulated in a specific agreement, the upstream IB's share arising from Sub-IB activity shall not be deducted from the Sub-IB's agreed direct commission.

21.3. Under the current program structure, the upstream IB's network share may be funded directly from the revenue share allocated by QMMFX to the IB program and shall not automatically reduce the Sub-IB's direct rate or commission.

21.4. The existence of an upstream IB shall not in itself reduce the financial entitlements agreed between QMMFX and the Sub-IB unless the applicable commercial structure expressly provides otherwise.

21.5. Sub-IB rates, levels and revenue calculation methods may be negotiated and individually configured, and may change based on performance, trading volume, client numbers, network level or other commercial criteria.

21.6. No IB may promise a Sub-IB binding commission rates or financial terms on behalf of the Company without QMMFX's approval.

21.7. QMMFX may amend the Sub-IB structure for future activities due to changes in the business model, liquidity conditions, legal requirements, risk management or other legitimate reasons.

Article 22 — IB Responsibility for the Sub-IB Network

22.1. Each Sub-IB is an independent person and is directly responsible for complying with the agreement and laws governing its activities.

22.2. An upstream IB shall refrain from providing prospective Sub-IBs with false information concerning QMMFX cooperation terms.

22.3. An upstream IB shall not: (a) enter into binding agreements with Sub-IBs in QMMFX's name without Company authorization; (b) promise guaranteed rates or income outside Company-approved terms; (c) receive Sub-IB funds on behalf of QMMFX; or (d) misrepresent its authority within the QMMFX structure.

22.4. A Sub-IB's breach shall not automatically render the upstream IB liable. However, where the upstream IB participated in, organized, knowingly facilitated or exploited the breach to abuse the commission program, the Company may take appropriate measures against its account and network structure.

22.5. If suspicious activity is detected in part of a network, the Company may temporarily suspend payment of commissions associated with that part pending completion of its review.
